Poems about Wonderland, written by me.

A poem I wrote a while back about Wonderland. It was going to be the intro to a book, but then I never wrote the book!

It's supposed to be a letter, from the White Rabbit, calling a grown-up Alice back to Wonderland.

Edit: as of June 3, 2026, this is my second-ever fic to have a Podfic made of it ☐☐☐

Chapter 1: To Dearest Alice

Hatter mad, cat with grin

Smoking insect, agreeing twin

Queen of hearts, lady red

One runs in place, one lost her head

Down the rabbit hole we go

Who are you? Do you even know?

Talking flower, shrinking cake

All arrive here by mistake

Hare of march, dormouse dreams

A land of wonder, with oozing seams

Come dear Alice, heed our call

Come dear girl, save us all

The vorpal sword went snicker-snack

Yet the Jabberwock is back

Callay caloo, caloo callay

Find Time, before the Solstice Day

Heed our quest, to land of snow
Down the rabbit hole you go

Chapter 2: When One Talks In Riddles

When one talks in riddles
And dances in code
It is easy to guess
Their humble abode

When rabbits have kid gloves
And dodos can race
It easy to know
The exact place

When queens play croquet
With feather and spike
It is easy to guess
Try, if you like

With maddest of hatters
And gossiping flowers
And singing dormouses
And small cakes with powers

Where time has a face
And gryphons argue with girls
Where babes can be pigs
And the world twists and then twirls

Where mirrors are doors
By another name
Those that venture there
Are never the same

Where truly we are all
The dream of a man
Nonsense and non-sense
It's Wonderland!
